TRAVELLING WITHOUT A TICKET.

In the Police Court yesterday morning before Messrs. R. C. Grenier and F. G. Collins, J.J.P., a Russian named Arthur Vander Kodak, was charged with having travelled in a railway carriage, between Bundaberg and Maryborough, without having paid his fare. Traffic Inspector Foster represented the Railway Department, and the defendant, who pleaded guilty, stated that he had travelled from Childers to Bundaberg, and had had no intention of coming to Maryborough. He had got that drunk, however, that he did not know what he was doing. He was a returned soldier, and when he got rum into him, he completely lost his memory. Inspector Foster stated that defendant had been found in a lavatory on Saturday night's mail train by Foreman Porter Bellert, and having no money to pay his fare, he was handed over to the police. Senior Sergeant Sullivan said that defendant had the reputation of being a hard-working man, but on account of his drinking habits, he had been discharged from the Isis Central mill, where he was formerly employed. A fine of £1/1/ with the amount of fare 6/6 added, in default three days' imprisonment was imposed.
