

room, and he did not see her again, and when he inquired of Porter what had become of her he received a punch, which knocked him down. He remembered nothing further. He was three days in Sydney Hospital.

When Gusaroff was brought to the police station by a civilian he was bleeding freely, and was without vest, collar, tie, and hat. The missing vest contained the money referred to in the charge.

Porter was committed for trial.