

A RUSSIAN COUNT.

In Training near Berri.

Mr. C. E. Gyllensten, who can describe himself as a Russian Count if he so desires, arrived at Mr. Hobbs' block near Berri on Monday to undergo a course of training. He is the son of a former grand duke who lived in Petrograd.

The writer of this paragraph first met Mr. Gyllensten in an Australian military hospital at Southall, near London, shortly after the Armistice. Mr. Gyllensten was then an orderly in the officers' quarters. He sent a telegram to Princess Patricia congratulating her upon her marriage and received a letter of thanks in reply. This and the letter from Queen Alexandra he takes great care of. He also cherishes a telegram from the Prince of Wales in which His Royal Highness thanked him for a message of welcome to Australia sent from near William Creek where he was trying his luck at the opal fields.

Mr. Gyllensten hopes that the day will arrive when a government will be established which will hand over his father's estates to the family. The his father's estates to the family. The Norwegian Ambassador is keeping him in touch with what is happening in Russia.

While engaged in timber cutting near Renmark last week Mr. W. Nicholls received a severe axe cut in one of his knees. He was taken to the Renmark Hospital by Mr. McKenzie, his employer, and had his injury treated.
