

SEAMAN LOSES £90

John Kapteln, a seaman on the schooner K. V. Kruise, now in port, is not likely soon to forget his experiences in Sydney. So far they have cost him £90.

He was in company with two affable strangers yesterday afternoon, moving about the city. Last night he discovered that he had lost twenty-two 20-dollar gold pieces and five five-dollar pieces.